

Llewelyn Hughes

Llewelyn Hughes is associated with the Center for International Studies at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, where he specializes in the political economy of energy security. Llewelyn has extensive experience in government affairs in Japan. From 1998-2000 he served as international aide and interpreter to Ichiro Ozawa, current leader of the Democratic Party of Japan. During this time he traveled extensively with Mr. Ozawa, facilitating and attending meetings with senior US, Chinese, and other officials, as well as managing press and embassy relations.

Llewelyn has also advised private sector clients in the energy, telecommunications, retail and aerospace sectors on the management of government and public relations, including Rio Tinto, Wal-Mart, Vodafone, Enron Japan, and a major aircraft manufacturer. Llewelyn has a masters degree from the University of Tokyo and a bachelor of arts from the University of Melbourne, Australia. He is a citizen of Australia, Great Britain and New Zealand, and speaks and reads Japanese fluently.